

Building Authority under investigation

By Thomas O. Kershaw

The University of Lowell's Building Authority is under investigation by State Police from the Attorney General's Office. The investigation was brought about when the ULowell Building Authority was named in allegations stemming from the Gerald Indelicato affair.

Indelicato has been accused of forging the governor's signature on Authority reappointments including former ULowell Authority member Angelica Georgelos.

University officials have little to say about the investigation but sources have said that records, accounts, and contracts, are coming under scrutiny, including excessive charges billed back to the students.

Since the ouster of Ms. Georgelos, the Building Authority has come under fire from within as well. Richard K. Donahue, a local attorney, and chairperson of the University Board of Trustees has called for the consideration of the elimination of the Building Authority citing duplication of workload at the University and State level. Mr. Donahue, who also sits on the Board of Directors of the Building Authority, has raised other questions about the awarding of no-bid contracts to sub-contractors.

One contract, for $15 million was awarded to Ivy Hall Catering, the previous food service company in the residence halls, without going to bid. The contract was to run until July 1989 with a two year extension to be elected by the concessionaire. The company is owned by Ernest Kaknes who reportedly had close ties with members of the Building Authority. The contract was sold to ARA Services in the Spring of

Other allegations under investigation include the retaining of Todisco Associates, a consulting company, without a formal contract. In 1986 Todisco received over $72,752 in fees from the Building Authority.

Mr. Phil Todisco's duties are not formally understood even by Authority members. Vouchers for services provided are unclear and do not show consistency in billing rates.

Still other questions have been raised concerning the use of student fees under the control of the Building Authority and the use of student money to pay for Building Authority functions. Allegedly, $15,000 was used from the $50 student union fee, charged to each student, to build Ivy Hall catering an office inside of Fox Hall. The office on the second floor of Fox handles the administrative work of the food service company. Food Services has an existing office in the Smith Hall cafeteria and questions as to the contractual need to pay for the new office have arisen. Student monies may also have been used to pay for expensive parties.

The Building Authority, established during the late 1960's to finance building construction, may have gotten involved in areas of student affairs without the necessary qualifications or personnel. There are also reports that Building Authority members have taken extensive paid vacations and sick leave.

The State Police investigation is expected to be completed soon, with details of the allegations made public and charges, if necessary, to be filed.

Ms Donna Tabloski, Executive Director of the Building Authority was unavailable for comment.

Spring Carnival, a ULowell tradition, is returning. Contact your neighborhood Student Government or your favorite club to find out how you can get involved!

Watergate prosecutor speaks on civil rights and desegregation

By Margaret Smith

Harvard law Professor Archibald Cox spoke about civil rights in the 1980's last Thursday in the O'Leary Library's room 222 between 3:00 and 4:30. His talk, sponsored by the Lowell chapter of the National Student Business League, was introduced by chapter President Audrey Frazier and focused on recent gains and losses in civil rights in the U.S.

Cox called the civil rights movement "the coming of age of the black people," although the movement has had obvious effects on the lives of men and women of all races.

"I can't resist recalling a little bit of history of great desegregation cases of schools," he said, since inadequate education of black children resulted in the first race discrimination cases brought to the Supreme Court after the Civil War. He cited Charles

Houston, who assembled a group of respected black lawyers to deal with legal/racial issues. Houston, whose father Thomas was an aide to General Grant and a pall bearer for Lincoln, had been a lawyer in the otherwise all-white Virginia state court room. A stern, hard worker, Houston was referred to as "iron pants" by his students at Harvard and by associates.

Judge William Hasting was the first black judge on the Federal Court of Appeals. Thoroughgood Marshall, whose mother was a school teacher and father a steward at a Baltimore country club, was another lawyer in this group. They realized that desegregation and racial equality had to begin in public schools, since inferior education meant inferior jobs and pay and ignorance about one's rights. For example, the University of Mississippi would not admit blacks, but would pay their tuition to go to inferior schools. While the University of Texas also refused blacks, an all-black school was built for them in Texas. However, it was no secret that only graduates from U-Texas would excel either professionally or politically.

"Courageous lawyers alone were not enough," Cox said. "It took some remarkably courageous parents." Thoroughgood Marshall proposed to represent the cases of any 20 black parents who wished to bring a segregation suit on behalf of their children in public schools. He needed at least that many, since he knew these parents would soon face coercion and threats from whites to drop their cases.

One such instance, Cox said, was that of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Briggs, who had five children

Their presentation will focus on the admissions process to medical school and the preparation needed in leading up to admissions.

Need a place for quiet study?

At the beginning of the Fall semester, with the cooperation of students who study at the North Campus Lydon Library, the third floor was designated a QUIET FLOOR. Furniture was rearranged and flyers were distributed to encourage a quiet atmosphere. As a result, there were far fewer complaints of noise and lack of consideration, and many students expressed appreciation.

Once again, this semester the Library asks students to use the third floor only for quiet, individual study. Until the building expansion is completed, the Library will at times be very crowded, so we ask for your patience and support.

Test Anxiety Workshops

The Counseling center will be offering two 2-session workshops on controlling test anxiety, including aspects of relaxation and cognitive restructuring. ## CAMPUS SHORTS

Antlers Antics

Hoping to control increasingly unruly fans at basketball games across the country, the National College Athletic Association announced Feb. 11 it was empowering referees to get tough with spectators. This ruling is in response to an increase of fans throwing things like toilet paper, ice cubes, dead fish and chickens on the court.

Notable in the bad behavior category is U. Missouri at Columbia, whose rooting section, known as the Antlers often shouts "smells like a bus" when visiting players' names are announced. Recently an ISU player jumped into the stands to silence a fan's comments. "All I did was hold up a sign that said 'Your Momma is a Cow'" said Antler Mike Harvey.

When their athletic dept. told the Antlers to be nicer, they showed up at the next home game dressed in "nice guy" costumes such as Gandhi, Lincoln, the Pope, and Santa Claus. They shouted "good try" when opponents missed a shot and "sorry about the score", pertaining to the 21-4 lead.

Black Protests

While a nearly week-long of a UMass Amherst building focused attention on college racial tensions, minority students at other schools continued to complain of mistreatment and administrators kept apologizing for it.

At U. Iowa, law school dean William Hines apologized for an anecdote told by Judge Gerald Heaney, about a "negro" defendant dressed in loud clothes and jewelry. Hines apologized in writing to "anyone who was offended."

U. Maryland Chancellor issued a statement denouncing a "distasteful and invidious" flier circulated at College Park last semester. It was a fake ad for "Arab Extra Dry," and it prompted 28 campus groups to petition for an anti-discrimination statement.

At the U. of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia campus police say 2 white students and 7 friends harassed a black dorm receptionist and then ran through the dorm shouting racial slurs.

Henry Johnson, a U. of Michigan official told a national conference on campus racism said campuses are "truly under siege" by racist fliers, graffiti, vandalism and verbal affronts. "But the good thing is it's forcing us to come to grips with the fact that we can't continue to do business as usual" said Johnson.

Republicans group splits

(CPS)As the primary season lurched into high gear, still another campus chapter of College Republicans (CR) has split apart.

Paul Weiss, defeated in a Feb. 2 race for the presidency of the University of Texas at El Paso (UTEP) College Republicans, 5 days later asked the group that oversees all College Republicans activities in Texas to recognize him as leader of the UTEP chapter.

The state CRS, moreover, reportedly gave him the charter, though Weiss's opponents claim it was because Weiss told it he, not Beverly Shelton, had been duly elected as UTEP's College Republicans leader.

The acrimony and strife at UTEP mirror similar controversies that have rocked the group -- in 1984 a major player in delivering a big student vote for Ronald Reagan -- during the last year, and has left it divided in some areas.

At the top of the organization, national Chairman Stockton Reeves' spring, 1987, campaign against John Hester, now head of the Mississippi CRs, produced divisive charges of bullying, packing conventions with unqualified delegates, meddling in campus and state chapter affairs and inappropriately trying to align the group with presidential candidate Jack Kemp.

Some state groups -- notably in Florida and California -- have split into factions that barely talk to each other.

Now campus chapters like UTEP are being disrupted as well:

* In December, the University of Missouri chapter Vice President Mike Young resigned under fire after accusing 2 other CR officers of embezzlement, vote fraud and Nazism.

Young said fellow CR Jeff Kester made anti-Semitic remarks and someday hoped to name himself "fuhrer" of a fascist state he wants to create. He produced a Kester notebook outlining such a plan.

Kester admitted to writing the outline, adding, "I have made no statements towards any race or religion that I believe to be true."

Young also accused CR President Shelly Robinett of election fraud.

He said Robinett, formerly executive secretary of the Missouri state CRs, inflated the number of CRs in the state to help Missouri gain extra votes at last June's national convention.

National chairman Reeves and UTEP dissident Weiss have been accused of similar tactics.

Robinett and Kester, denying the accusations, proposed impeaching Young, who resigned.

* Michigan State's conservatives have split into 2 Republican groups, the College Republicans and the MSU Campus Republicans, formed when some CRs were embarrassed by the group's verbal attacks on homosexuals.

CR leader Jeff Holland "is a liability for the group," complains Campus Republican President David Murley, adding Holland wastes the group's efforts on pointless "liberal bashing."

Holland agreed his group has been "immature," but explained, "we want to be fun-loving, and have fun with out politics."

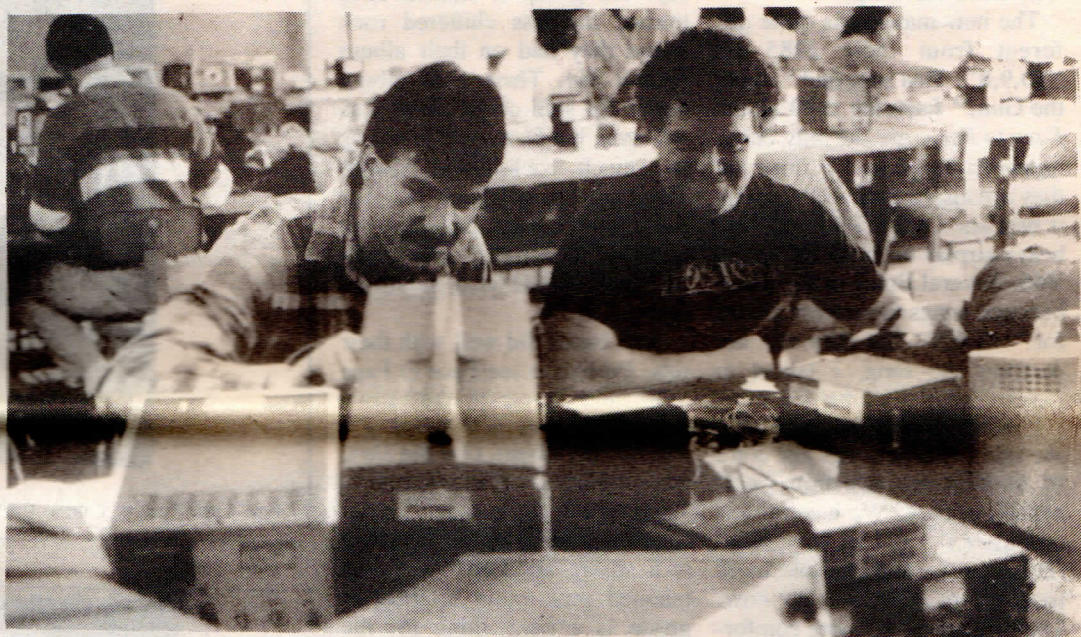

UTP CR's too, had spent several meetings during the fall debating whether they should be focussing on immediate student issues like education or passing resolutions about Central American and the Strategic Defense Initiative.

But the internal debate festered into something more when Weiss, chapter President Shelton alleges, misrepresented himself th state leaders as head of the ITEP chapter,

"He said he was the president," Shelton told the Prospector, the campus paper.

In reply, Weiss told the paper, "we're only interested in doing what's right, and Bev (Shelton) wasn't doing it."

Watergate prosecutor speaks to ULowell

"going to school" in Clarendon County, Mississippi. The county spent five times as much on the education of whites as blacks, and did not even provide a school building for black children. In Clarendon County, as one person said, "We have only good niggers." No sooner did the public learn that the Briggs had joined Marshall's group when both were fired from their jobs. The bank threatened foreclosure on their home.

"I'm always fascinated by the human stories behind these cases," Cox said. "We lawyers tend to think in the abstract of plaintiffs and defendants. It takes intelligence, experience and sufficient imagination to put yourself in the skin of those involved."

The other crucial race issue, of course, was voting rights. Many southern precincts required "literacy qualification tests" for one to be eligible to vote. While these biased tests often denied blacks with high school diplomas and even PhD's the right to vote, many uneducated "red-necks" passed the test without trouble. The Voting Act later prohibited such tests.

Since the passing of the Civil Rights Amendment in 1964, there have been significant gains and losses in the movement toward equality. Though the Kennedy, Johnson and Carter administrations were chiefly pro-civil rights, the Reagan Administration has been chiefly indifferent, according to Cox. The result has been a stagnation of concern over civil rights issues, with racism and sexism resurfacing in more subtle and technical ways. "One of the reasons... has been limits in the legal doctrine-limits in the logic in the law as it has been developed." Lack of sufficient support for the Equal Rights Amendment, as well as recent outbreaks of racial violence on streets and on campuses, are more blatant symptoms of indifference.

Cox also spoke about the controversies of Affirmative Action. "How far can and should government give members of minorities, previously victims of years of discrimination, preference in admission to colleges or jobs?" While the Reagan Administration has opposed A.A. in every field, current civil rights movements have tried to bolster it.

"I think all of us would agree, that the ideal of American society is opportunity for individuals based on individual merit, not race, sex, religion or any other irrelevant thing."

He cautions, however, that "quotas" for minorities, if taken to the extreme, will defeat the purpose. "I think a certain loss of individuality comes into place. I have had black students talk about the burden of 'being the beneficiaries' of Affirmative Action and the responsibility of being models for other blacks."

Yet Cox also noted the effects of the Civil Rights movement being felt even in the 1980's. He sees the rejection of Robert Bork as Supreme Court judge as an example. He thinks "it is a real, and important, victory for civil rights."

"When I talk about progress, please don't think that I consider the job done. But pretty good legal machinery has been set in place." Awareness, understanding and the willingness to act, he feels, are the key to further advancement.

Archibald Cox, the Watergate prosecutor fired by Richard Nixon in 1973, is the chairman of the civil rights organization Common Cause, and a professor of law at Harvard

Face to Face and the Del Fuegos Rock Cumnock

By Stewart Nichols

Face to Face started off the evening with a well-executed sound check. Lead singer Laurie Sargent came on after a couple of instrumentals and warmed up with "Change in the Wind," a song from their new album. She ran up and down the notes easily. Unfortunately, the audience had not yet been allowed into the hall. That was too bad because it was the most unrestrained signing she did all night.

Not that there was anything wrong with her voice later in the evening, but this was the group's first gig in about six months; they've been in the studios doing a new album. At a couple of points in the set I detected tension in her voice, probably because the group had no idea how the audience liked the new material. I saw people swaying to the music, however, so I wasn't the only one who liked the songs.

The new material is quite different from their 1985 hit "10,9,8". That song and "Under the Gun," from the 1984 album Face to Face, are the only dance numbers the group has done but they are also the songs the group is best known for. Both received heavy airplay on local TV station V66. Several times in the pause between songs there were chants for "10,9,8" but they did not perform the song. I talked to Laurie about that after the set.

"We're a rock and roll band," she said. "Those songs just don't fit in with the direction we're headed in now. We have a new manager, a new label (Polygram), and a lot more freedom in what we do now. Maybe after we're more comfortable with the new stuff we'll feel better about doing that old stuff."

Singer Dan Zanes of the Del

Fuegos started off their set by telling the audience why they played second.

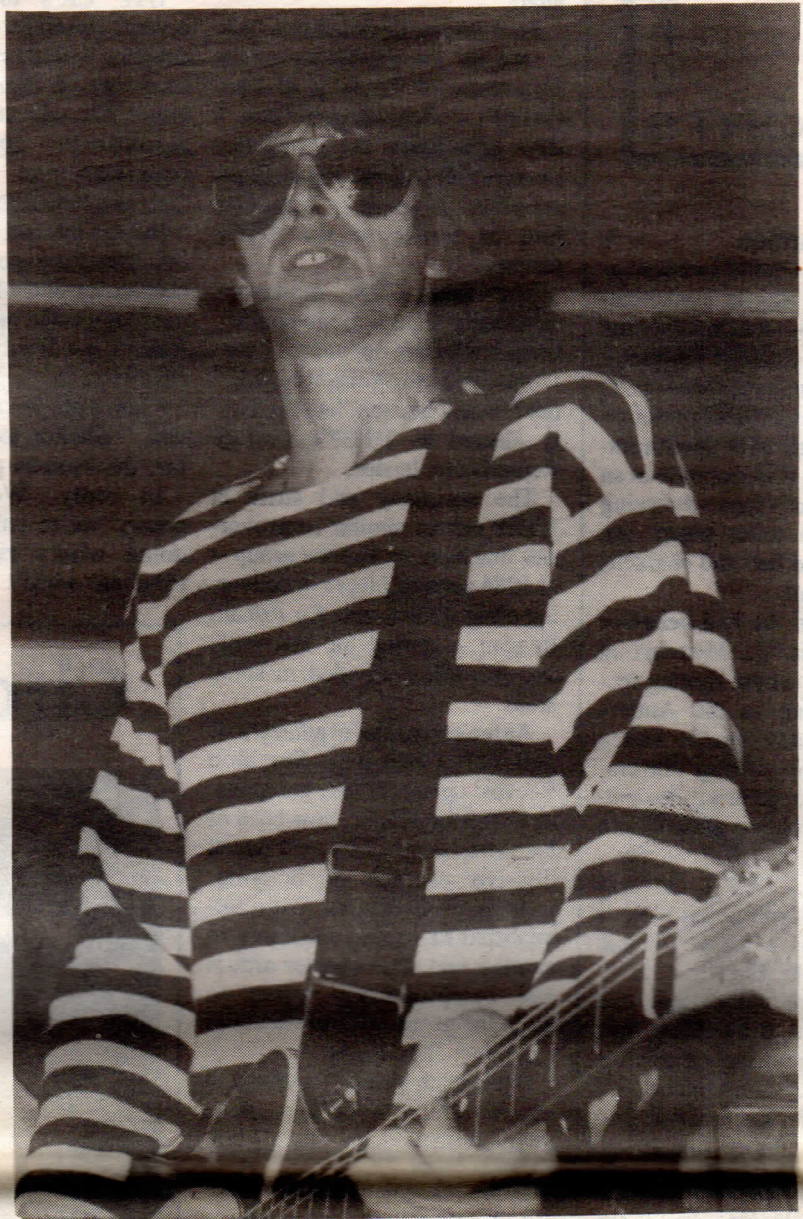

"We told them they could have their names first on the tee-shirts if they would go on first." Dan gave a wink of his eye as he continued, "We said our bass player is doing a sit-down gig playing the cello at some hotel and he's going to be late. I think he's at the Hotel Sonesta. They bought it."

The audience had a good laugh, but it was true. Tom Lloyd was playing a cello gig in front of people from Suffolk Law College.

The Del Fuegos have a new guitar player, Trinidad born Phil Haynen, the former lead singer of The Dawgs. In addition to singing he also writes songs for the band.

The Del Fuegos did a good job with "Long Dark Summer," and "I Still Want You." These songs really roused the audience. Dan says the group is headed back toward the less cluttered rock sound they had on their album Boston MA. Their 1987 album Stand Up sold about as well as "Boston," but Dan feels there was too much background sound. They are headed back into the studios after they work out the kinks of having a new band member, maybe in a month or two.

Both bands did well with their sets. I'd like to see Face to Face again after they work out the live versions of their new songs. I'll also buy the album, One Big Day, when it comes out in mid-April. The Del Fuegos is a good band to see most any time. Phil Haynen is a strong addition. Adding a talented guy to an established group is a risky thing for the oldtimers's egos. I hope things work out.

Spring Retreat to Cape Cod

The Catholic Center has once again reserved Sunset Lodge in Sandwich, MA for the annual spring retreat. Situated on a scenic lake on Cape Cod, the lodge is an excellent location for a peaceful, quiet weekend before the hectic days of final exams or graduation.

This year's retreat will focus on the challenge of becoming an Adult Christian and look at how we integrate faith, community and joy as we grow emotionally, physically and spiritually in a world of almost limitless options. Through several talks, discussions and opportunities for reflection and recreation, the weekend aims to be a time of renewal and refreshment. Though given out of the Catholic tradition, all are invited and most welcome.

We will plan to leave from the Catholic Center on Friday evening April 15th at about 5:00 p.m. and return by 2:00 p.m. on Sun day April 17th. Transportation will be arranged for those needing it and the cost for the weekend is $10.00, $5.00 of which should be paid at the time of registration. Scholarship assistance is also available for those needing it.

In order to make a reservation for the retreat, please call or stop by the Catholic Center to fill out an application. Applications may also be picked up at the Fox Towers Office, Fox 608A from Monday through Thursday from 12:30 p.m. to 4:00 p.m.

For more information, please call Father Paul or Pat Davison at 454-0151 or 452-5000 Ext. 2464.

.....For the Bible tells me so

The story is told, and I'm sure that by now it is somewhat legendary, that once, when German theologian Karl Barth was visiting the University of Chicago, a young, budding theologian asked him, what in his opinion was the greatest of all the Christian doctrines. Barth is reported to have answered, "Jesus Loves Me, this I know. For the Bible tells me so."

The Bible consisting of both the Old and New Testament, is one of the most remarkable historical documents there is. It was written over a span of some 1600 years by more than 40 different authors, using three different languages and yet its message is consistently the same from beginning to end: "God's redemption of mankind."

But the problem is how do we determine the historical reliability of this or any other ancient document, when we do not possess any of the original copies. Well, researchers have a test they use called the test of bibliography. According to this test, the more ancient manuscripts you have and the shorter the time, between the original and the copy, then the more reliable is the information that you have. And this makes sense. Supposedly, an older copy is going to be closer to the true copy than a newer copy. And the more copies you have than the easier the task of determining the meaning of the original.

Currently, there are about 13,000 manuscripts of the Bible, the oldest is a portion that was written about forties after the original was written. Compare that with some of the other books of antiquity. There are only nine good copies of Caesar's Gallic Wars and they come to us some 900 years after the originals were penned. There are only 20 copies of Livy's History of Rome and the oldest of these is a copy that was done some 400 years after the original.

So as you can see, that when it comes time to testing the reliability of the Bible as a historical document, if you apply the same test to it that you would to other ancient historical documents, that the Bible passes with flying colors. Now, while this may not convince you of Christianity's truth, it still stands as a piece of evidence in its favor, that you can't simply sweep under the rug.

If you are concerned about your relationship with God and would like to talk with someone about it, please contact Campus Ambassadors at SIC box 111 N or call 667-9529.

Frankenstein Visits Durgin

Frankenstein by Barbera Field. Directed by Micheal Maggio. At the Ulowell Center for the Performing and Visual Arts, Durgin Hall.

Randy Edgar

Those hoping to see a barrel-chested monster with electrodes sticking out of his head were probably disappointed, but that is just as well. The Guthrie Theatre's presentation of Frankenstein does far more justice to Mary Shelley's classic novel than any Hollywood horror flick ever could.

As in the novel, the creature is presented as an intelligent being with human needs of love and companionship. Much of the action consists of a confrontation between Frankenstein and his creation, in which the ethical and philosophical questions about their relationship are explored. This takes place at the North Pole, the "top of the world," where Frankenstein has hunted the creature with the intention of killing it. As they argue, the scene periodically returns to the past, where we see Frankenstein's development: how he handles his mother's death, his lack of humor as a disillusioned young student, his brilliance in the laboratory, and with Elizabeth, his bride to be, haunted by the presence of his "monster."

The flashbacks are most effective when the dialogue of the characters in the present simultaneously parallels that of past. As Victor, the young Frankenstein, confirms his love with Elizabeth, the old Frankenstein recalls how he loved her, lamenting her loss.

Despite the play's serious theme, there were some displays of humor which seemed to be at odds with the subject matter. In a scene depicting Frankenstein just before his mother's death, he prays, "I'll never think of Elizabeth's body, as long as the screaming will stop." Yes, it is funny, but no, it doesn't fit. Only the humor of the aged Professor Kempe seems appropriate. "Read your professor's mail," he urges the young Frankenstein, "in order to keep abreast of the latest scientific developments." His humor works because Micheal Tezia, as Kempe, makes it a definitive part of the character.

Set against a gothic/science fiction background, the play's central theme of creating life and taking responsibility for it generates much interest. Stephen Pelinski, as Frankenstein, and Peter Syvertsen, as the creature, create a great deal of tension with their verbal attacks. It is only with the misplaced humor and an ambiguous ending that the play falters. Overall though, the play is impressive, especially for a "monster" story.

WHY PLEDGE ULLOWELL CC

Why did I pledge the ULowell Comedy Club? The answers to this question are many and quite varied. It could be that I wanted to be a part of an organization that is deeply entrenched in a long standing tradition. Maybe because of the many ways in which it has changed the lives of its members since it was established four months ago. It could also be because of the many people that you could meet, but the main reason why I pledged the ULCC was for the way in which they could prepare me for the future.

Before joining the Bristerhood (Brotherhood & Sisterhood - we don't discriminate like some CLUBS on campus), I was satisfied in accepting Small Wonder as the pinnacle of television comedy. I was convinced that Jay Lenno was the best stand-up comic to ever walk the face of the earth. I was even considering joining a facist paramilitary youth organization, and running around in the woods with a fake gun on my weekends. After pledging the ULCC and going through the rigorous hazing, no strike that, I meant 'training course', my life has turned for the better.

Thanks to the 'ULCC edge', I can now stay up later and watch more movies during a marathon movie festival than any civilian. My training has given me the keen sense above the average student in being able to tell the difference between 'Earnest Goes to Camp' and 'Duck Soup'. I have also finally been able to determine that the 'Dukes of Hazard' is really a Communist plot to bring down the intelligence of America's youth. The stamina that I have gained in ULCC's training course has allowed me to visit more Boston comedy clubs in one night than I might have thought possible. This is the 'edge' that the ULCC can give you.

Make the big plunge, become one of the few, the proud, the well entertained. Be a ULowell Comedy Club member.

How to get a good feeling

Every day you get up--to go to school--go to work--do this, do that, rush here, rush there... Even though you may be fairly happy with your life, on some days don't you feel a little empty inside, as if you're just going through the motions? If you stop to think, you may find that an empty feeling inside occurs when a person gets caught up in the hectic details of life and loses sight of what is really important--caring about and helping others.

If you would like to do something important and meaningful, which will leave you with a good feeling inside, you might consider becoming an advocate for mentally retarded adults in a community residence. The Mental Health Association of Greater Lowell is looking for warm, caring, compassionate people who are willing to volunteer just a little time to make an incredible difference in the lives of a few people. Advocacy involves befriending, and sharing time with, some very special people who are not as fortunate to have the health and opportunities that most of us have. There are many different ways you could volunteer as an advocate. You could really make a difference in one person's life by providing the social and emotional support that each of our clients need. It is as simple as talking with them, taking them for a walk, out to a movie, to a museum or amusement park, maybe bowling or fishing, or just taking them for a ride, out to eat, or shopping. You might call or visit your client once every two weeks, and you don't necessarily have to take them anywhere. Just coming into the residence to have dinner with them, or to spend time with them doing activities or working on their skills, would be a great benefit for any of our clients.

It is possible to integrate your talents and interests into a volunteer experience that would be very rewarding. As a house advocate, you could provide group activities for our clients which are related to your own interests, hobbies and skills. For instance, if you like to paint or draw, you could work on art projects with some clients who have the same interest. If you are good at aerobics or gymnastics, you might visit the residence once a week for an hour to run an exercise program for the clients. If you have an interest in handicrafts, gardening, horseback riding, camping or whatever--the clients in our program could benefit from the activities you could provide.

If you have a little time to spare and would like to volunteer as an advocate for mentally retarded people, I really would like to talk to you. You can make such a difference in their lives in so little time. You will enrich their lives with new friendships and new experiences, and your life will be all the richer, too. From this experience, you can gain personal fulfillment and a new perspective in life, and a very good feeling inside.

African-Americans who made America great

Otis Boykin (1920-), who began his career as a laboratory assistant testing automatic controls for airplanes, has invented a wide range of electronic devices. One of his first achievements was a type of resistor now used in many computers, radios, television sets, and other electronically controlled devices. In addition, Boykin has developed a control unit for artificial heart stipulates, a variable resistor used in guided missiles, small components such as thick-film resistors for computers, a burglar-proof cash register, and a chemical air filter.

His innovations have had both military and commercial application. Some have reduced the cost of producing electronic controls for radio and television. At present, more than three dozen products with Boykin components are used throughout the world.

O.S.(Ozzie) Williams, (1921-) was the first African-American aeronautical engineer to be hired by Republic Aviation, Inc., during World War II. Subsequently, he joined Greer Hydraulics, Inc., where he became a group project engineer and helped develop the first airborne radar beacon for locating crashed aircraft. A specialist in small rocket engine design, Williams also was associated with the Reaction Motors Division of Thiokol Chemical Corporation.

In 1961, he joined Grumman International, where he was in charge of developing and producing the control rocket systems that guided lunar modules during moon landings.

This responsibility included administering nearly forty million dollars in subcontracts. Williams now is vice president of the firm, in charge of the trade and industrial relations with emerging African nations; here his work includes the application of solar and wind energy to African needs.

Without these and many other outstanding contributions made by African-Americans in the sciences and technologies, America would not be the trend-setter that it is today. Otis Boykin and O.S. Williams, two of the thousands of African-Americans who made America great.

Discover scuba diving, free!

You've always wanted to try scuba diving, but have never found the time. Now's your chance to try one of the most exciting sports in America, for FREE!

In a special effort to boost support of the Continuing Education Departments Scuba Program, the Aquatics Dept., under the direction of Andrew Cornellier, is offering all students, faculty, and staff, an opportunity to try diving, for free, right here in the University pool.

After an introductory slide presentation and a brief, informal lecture on some of the safety considerations of diving, we'll have you on scuba and breathing underwater. You'll experience the true freedom and weightlessness that only diving or space travel can supply - and we're a lot closer than NASA!

You will be under the direct supervision of certified diving professionals at all times, and all gear will be provided.

This Discover Scuba Program will be offered; Saturday, March 5 from 8:30 - 12:00, Saturday, March 26 from 10:00 - 2:00, and Thursday, March 31 from 10:30 - 2:00.

To ensure yourself of a chance to try this great sport, we ask that you sign up at a Student Information Center (North or South), the Continuing Ed. office beneath Cummock, at the pool, or at one of our displays about the school over the next few weeks.

The Continuing Education Dept. and the Aquatics Dept. offer a nationally certified course through the Professional Association of Diving Instructors (PADI), the largest diver training organization in the world. Courses are scheduled for beginning and advanced scuba diving. To find out more information concerning anything about the University Scuba program, stop by the Continuing Ed. office, or contact Staff Instructor, Dave Morton, Box 2656.

These stories are expensive

Thomas O. Kershaw

Editor

Millions of dollars are being funneled from the state colleges and universities. Why? Because absentee governor and presidential wannabe Dukakis can not possibly promote himself as the "Man who saved the state" when he is running deficits due to lack of revenues.

While Mike runs about telling tales of his great plans for bringing in more tax dollars that very plan has not worked in the home state. The solution? Grab every dollar to be found that has not yet been spent and ship it back to the state coffers. The effect? ULowell needs to trim a cool $1 million from its budget, now.

Equipment purchases will be the first thing to go. After that, who knows? It could mean additional lifeguards will not be hired. And new personnel from the part time programs may be let go. This would include faculty hired to cover additional sections of courses which are so desperately needed.

The time has come for one of two things to happen. That Dukakis admit to himself and the country that this is not a dream come true state all the while. The second is that the people of Massachusetts realize that the governor will do whatever is needed to make sure his political jive doesn't stink.

Students should not be made to pay for the inadequacies of a political campaign.

Nuke speak

Regardless of where one stands on the Nuclear Power issue, one must admit that the editorial in last week's Connector was a biased, one sided account of the events occurring the day of Governor Dukakis's visit.

First, it was wrongly implied that the demonstrators are inclined to follow the Governor around the country trying to win support for an unpopular stance. The facts are that the demonstration was organized on a mere two hours notice. Each participant was a first time protester. As for the pro-nuclear stand being unpopular, obviously the writer of the editorial has not been paying attention to public opinion polls. A recent Gallup Poll showed that 77% of Americans believe Nuclear Energy will be important in meeting future electricity needs.

I find it hard to believe that people who questioned the pro-nuclear stance were demeaningly asked if they knew anything about nuclear power as the writer claims. In fact during that day considerable effort was spent distributing information about nuclear power and the U.S. electricity needs. Obviously the writer has not taken any time (perhaps to busy with aerobics 201) to read this information. Contrary to the figures he states, the U.S. depends upon Nuclear Power for 17% of its electricity.

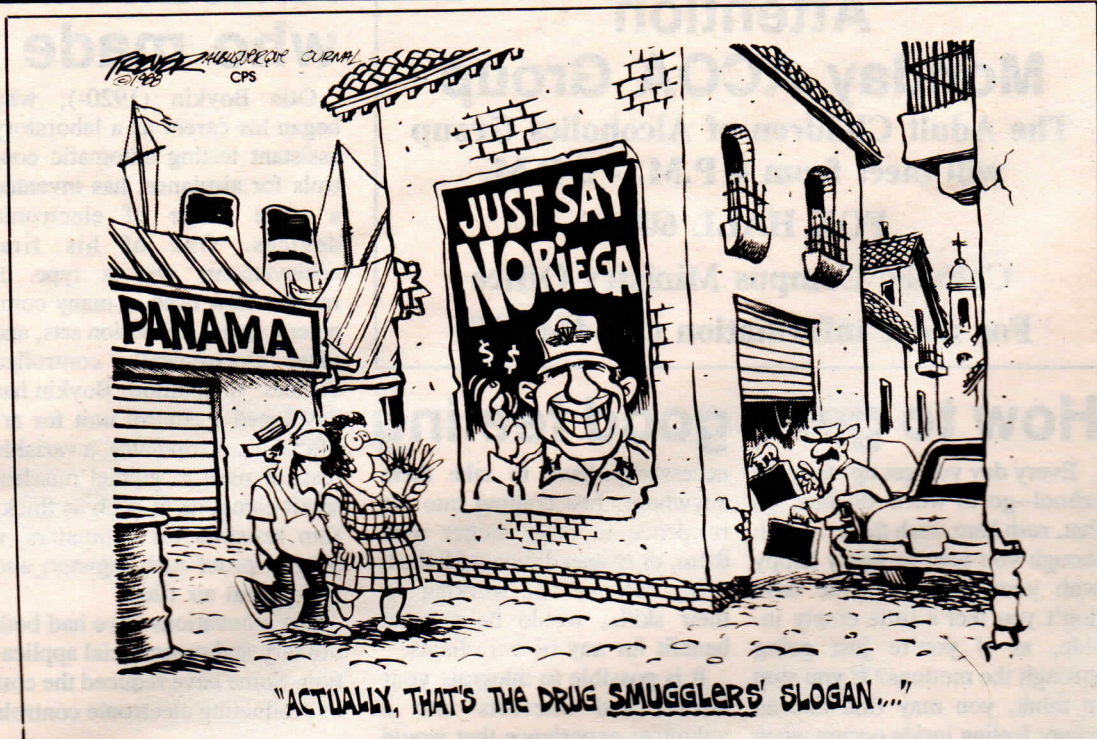

The motivation for the protest was not a desire to appear on television. It was to make known our differences with the Governor's energy policies. According to the New England Power Pool, even with Seabrook and Hydro Quebec Phase II on line, New England will have an electricity shortage by 1995. The Governor is proposing reliance on conservation, cogeneration, and other small power projects to meet this electricity demand. Although all three alternatives will be helpful, they cannot be relied upon to replace large scale generating plants. Much of our generating capacity is 15 or more years old. When these older plants are retired, new plants will have to be ready to replace this lost generating capacity. Due to the serious environmental impacts of burning coal and natural gas and the dangers of reliance on foreign oil, we believe Nuclear Power will have to provide an increased percentage of our electricity in the early 21st century.

The assertion that the protests motivation was to ensure a job future was ridiculous. Whether Seabrook goes on line or not, engineers will still be in large demand in the nuclear industry. Furthermore, under the most far fetched scenario that every nuclear power plant be shut down, a larger number of engineers would be needed in the decommissioning of these plants. Finally, many opportunities exist in the design, operation, and maintenance of the reactors that power each and every submarine in our Navy's fleet.

In conclusion, I believe last week's editorial was an attempt to undermine our right to express our opinions. I say this because the responses to the questions used in the editorial were misrepresentations of our actual positions on the issues.

Animal rights

Listed below are some of the many bills affecting animals.

Please let your legislators know your feelings on the issues.

Address all Representatives as: The Honorable _____

House of Representatives
Washington, D.C. 20515

Address all Senators as:
The Honorable _____

U.S. Senate
Washington, D.C. 20510

If possible, send a copy of your letter and the responses you receive to the Committee For Humane Legislation, 400 First Street NW, # 800, Washington, D.C. 20001. The letters and responses are very helpful when lobbying. If you need further information on any of the legislation, you may obtain it from the Committee for Humane Legislation.

Bills starting with "HR" should be addressed to the House of Representatives. Bills starting with "S" should be addressed to the Senate.

Bill HR 3584 sponsored by Gerry Studds - To improve efforts to monitor, assess and reduce the adverse impact of drift-nets.....SUPPORT

Bill HR 1708 sponsored by Robert Torricelli - "Research Accountability & Information Dissemination Act"-to establish a national center for research accountability to conduct full-text literature searches prior to federal funding of grant proposals involving the use of live animals. To prevent the duplication of experiments on live animals. This Bill is a cost cutting measure, as well, which will save taxpayers money by reducing the unnecessary repetition of federally funded research and save hundreds of thousands of animal lives. You are also encouraged to write Representative Waxman, Chairman of the Subcommittee on Health and the Environment, and ask him to hold hearings.....SUPPORT.

Troopers can cry

The following reading was sent to me by an unknown person through my school mailbox. It is an article from Ann Landers column. It reads:

Want to see a state trooper cry? Would you like to see him drop to his knees, bury his face in his hands and bawl like a baby or slam his fist into the side of a patrol car? It's easy enough to do. And it happens more frequently than most of us would think. Just load yourself up with some "good cheer", add a few beers or mixed drinks and drive your family home.

Refuse to listen when your wife suggests she drive home.

Assert yourself. Pay heed to your male ego.

Say, "Aw heck, ah can drive the car bedder with a few beers unner mah belt than you can cold sober."

Show her who's boss in your family.

Twenty minutes later you are standing in darkness on the side of the highway with broken glass and spilled gasoline at your feet.

Your wife is screaming, pinned beneath jagged edges of twisted metal.

Your two-year old daughter is silent.

Your six-year old son is sprawled face-down 30 feet away.

The highway trooper smelled the alcohol on your breath as you tried to explain, and he's not very gentle as he pushes you into the rear of the patrol car and tells you to shut your mouth.

He then pauses for a moment in the darkness before he turns his attention to you and the remains of your car and family.

Congratulations. You've made a trooper cry.

Everyday, situations like this occur. It could happen to any one of us with our own family or group of friends if we take driving and drinking lightly.

Remember, be a friend-don't drink and drive.

Thank you to whomever sent me the information.

Lori DeMartin
President, SADD

Bible babies

I found myself nodding my head in agreement as I read Father Garrity's Connector article, "Giving Religion a Bad Name". he accurately and eloquently describes what has happened to many of us. A desire for friendship and a real curiosity about God and the Bible can be used by overzealous people to pressure us and sometimes to manipulate us.

So I read Father Garrity's article with gratitude and appreciation. Yet, I felt deeply dismayed. Why? Because despite the coercive activities of cult or near-cult groups and despite the, sometimes, hypocrisy and failure of the Church I am convinced of the truth of God and of his revelation to us, the Bible. I fear that many students because of the desire to avoid the distasteful experiences Father Garrity describes will become discouraged and derailed in their spiritual quest. Some may decide to quit looking too soon.

There are cult groups active on campus who cross the fine line between persistence and harassment. But there are also groups on campus. Like the Catholic Center and the Protestant Campus Ministry and like Campus Ambassadors and Inter Varsity Christian Fellowship who take seriously the integrity of each individual and who do not believe that "the end justifies the means". St. Paul writing to the church of Corinth (a culture in many ways similar to ours) put it this way, "Therefore, since through God's mercy we have renounced secret and shameful ways; we do not use deception, nor do we distort the word of God. On the contrary, by setting forth the truth plainly we commend ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God." (2 Cor. 4:1,2)

The opportunity to ask real questions and to engage in open dialogue based upon mutual respect, careful listening and honest friendship is available to you here at ULowell. Do not give up your spiritual quest too soon. Reject the Cults but do not throw the baby out with the bath water.

The roommate game returns

Last year, ULowell's version of the Roommate Game was the exciting rage on campus. The game, based on T.V.'s Newlywed Game, involves floor, building and finally a campus wide competition. "Roommates" are quizzed on how much they know, or don't know about each other. Contestants in the absence of their "roommate" are asked questions ranging from "What brand of deodorant does your 'roommate' use?" to "In one word, describe your 'roommate's' ideal date?" This outrageous game took over ULowell last spring and you can be a part of the Second Annual Roommate Game taking place after spring break.

Knowing what your "roommate" will say, do, think, or like in any situation could win for you and your "roommate" $200 worth of shopping at the Pheasant Lane Mall. It is now worth getting to know your "roommate". "Roommate" appears in quotes because teammates do not have to be roommates to participate. Contestants are only required to be University students and to participate in only one floor competition. Register with the R.A. on the floor where you will compete. The registration fee is $2 per team.

VAX 8650 Account Numbers

The University policy is that all registered day school students should have access to computer facilities, principally the VAX 8650 cluster in the Academic Computer Center. To accomplish this, an account number was generated for all students who were registered as of Sept. 4th. Because of the volume of numbers generated, the accounts for all students were sent to the academic department of the student's major as found in their registration data. These departments have been very cooperative in helping to distribute these accounts to the students. But, unless you go to the department to request your number, you will not be able to gain access to the system.

If the departmental office of your major does not have your account, please come to Olsen Hall Room 102 and ask for Carolyn Wolf. She will be able to assist you in obtaining your account number.

These accounts will remain active for as long as you continue to be registered in the day school.

Take The Connector On Spring Break!

We're just so darn busy we won't get the time to hit the sun or the slopes. So do us a favor, take a copy of the Connector with you on Spring Break.

In the past, the Connector has travelled around the world. People from California to China to France all know the best place to get their news: the Connector.

The best photo (B&W preferably) of the Connector on Spring Break will win a prize to be announced at a later date. But you can be sure it'll be as great as the Connector itself.

Are You A Woman Who Loves Too Much?

- Do you feel that having a special person in your life could solve your problems of depression, aimlessness and loneliness?
- Even though this special person reminds you of others who have made you unhappy, do you feel that this time it's different?
- Does your involvement with this person jeopardize your well-being, your health, even your safety?
- Are you terrified of the depression that will follow if you break up?

If so you may want to explore these topics in a free self-help group of women whose relationships are or have been exploitive, compromising or destructive. This group, based on the book "Women Who Love Too Much", by Robin Norwood will meet on Mondays from 12-1 p.m. in the conference room next to the SIC in the South Campus SUB. For more information contact either the Counseling Center, ext. 2390, or the Catholic Center, 454-0151.

Common Characteristics Adult Survivors of Abuse

*Abuse - emotional, physical, sexual, or by neglect is any behavior designed to control and subjugate another through fear, humiliation, and verbal or physical assaults.

- feel uncertain about normal relationships, families, or work behaviors.
- consistently deal with after-effects of past abuse: harsh self-judgment, difficulty completing tasks, difficulty trusting and being intimate, and confusion with limit setting.
- often feel isolated and afraid of people and authority figures (parents, employers....)
- in the face of success and actual competence feel like imposters.
- in relationships: feeling hollow inside in the presence of love and support; hungering for approval, losing their identity in the process; feelings of fear of abandonment; having problems with intimacy; getting close to someone, i.e. trusting; feeling like a victim in personal and career relationships - inability to stand up for self and tending to give in to others.
- find it difficult to have fun - to stop being so responsible, so loyal.
- may suppress feelings about traumatic childhood - finding it hard to feel or express feelings, including happiness.
- act like adults since early years, yet inside often feel like children.

A group will be forming to share feelings and stories from the past as well as focus on overcoming the after-effects (the current behaviors and beliefs that hold us back) to achieve the goal of empowered living.

The group meets on Wednesdays, from 2:15 to 3:15 p.m. in Chris Oatis' office (off the Adult Learner Drop-In Center) in the South Campus SUB.

For further information, contact Imogene Stulken - Campus Ministry (454-0683) or Jane Samuelson - Counseling Center (452-5000 ext. 2390).

Get involved

Are you sick and tired of seeing these large, obnoxious ads taking up all the space on the sports page? Do you wish that there were more interesting articles that could inform you of the happenings in ULowell athletics? Well stop whining and wishing and do something about it. If and when you attend a ULowell sporting event, write something about it. Even if you don't know the players' names, simply write their numbers where you want their names, and we at the sports department will take care of it. Any submission will at least be considered (I say that because if I go to the same event, chances are that my article will go in.) Multiple submissions will be judged on the quality and content of the article. Length may or may not be a decisive factor. When submitting a sports article, follow the same procedure as any other submission, but please put a box number or some other way in which I can contact you. If you never thought you could be a sports reporter, now's your chance to see if you have the right stuff.

We at the Health Service just wanted to let you know about the services we offer here at the University.

We have an office on North Campus behind Lydon library and another in the South S.U.B.. Both are open Monday through Friday 8:00 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. Our service is staffed by two R.N.s and two Nurse Practitioners, and is free. The only things you may have to pay for are lab fees, prescriptions and X-rays.

When you are feeling ill with anything from a sore throat to a sore toe, please come and see us. We provide women's health services by a Nurse Practitioner on both campuses. Two physicians come to our office on North Campus and appointments can be made to see them. Allergy shots can be arranged at our North Campus office. There are information resource files at both of our offices on a variety of topics; feel free to use them.

Stop by and visit if you're sick, we do a lot more than you may think.

AL-ANON

Silva NE Champion

By RR

Sophomore Gustavo Silva of Billerica, MA competed in one of his finest races on Saturday, February 27. Running a 7.72 in Friday's 55m high hurdle trials, Gus came back to run a 7.62 in Saturday's finals and clinch the New England Championship title. Way to go, Gus!! The time may even be good enough to send him to the national championships. Gus is currently standing eighth; if the top twelve hurdlers are taken to the nationals, he will go.

Other excitement at this past weekend's NEIAA Championships included the distance medley relay (DMR). Sophomore Declan Gilbert, senior John Choate, senior Jason Cakouros, and junior Brian Moody ran a fantastic total time of 10:04:78—this was good enough for third place, overall. Competing in the 5000m event were junior Michael Wright and senior Michael Woodman. After holding onto the lead for almost 2800m, Mike Wright finished 8th with a time of 14:50:59. Unfortunately, Mike Woodman was not as lucky. After leading almost half the race, he took a fall which knocked him out of competition. His injuries were minimal and is A-OK.

After running a 4:16 mile in the DMR on Friday, Brian Moody finished 8th in the 3000m with a time of 8:28:4. As a team, ULowell finished 11th at the championships held at Boston University. Northeastern University won the meet, followed by Boston College and Southern Connecticut State. The team is looking forward to the ECAC Championships this weekend being held at SCSU.

Other track news

By RR

Although the men's track team fared well at the NEIAA Championships, the EIAA Championships were not as uplifting. Sophomore hurdling star Gus Silva finished 3rd at the meet held at the US Coast Guard Academy, on Saturday, February 13; he finished 5th in the long jump. Freshman Bill Bradbury did not make the finals in the 55m high hurdles, as he finished 4th in the trials. The 55m dash sprinters, Bill Campbell and Joe Pelano, finished 3rd in each of their heats; neither one made it to the finals.

Things, however, did not remain this way. In the 3000m, senior Mike Woodman finished 3rd with a time of 8:48:2, and junior Mike Wright finished 2nd in 8:41:3. The 500m sprinters John Choate and Andy Fredricks had times of 1:06:4 and 1:09:6, respectively. Junior Brian Moody ran the 3000m in a time 8:35:7 to finish 5th and sophomore Declan Gilbert ran the 1000m in 2:33:9 and brought home 3rd place.

The highlights of the day came when senior Jason Cakouros won the unseeded 1500m with a time of 4:01:1, followed by freshman Suraffel Assefa in 4th in 4:06:3.

And in the most exciting event of the day, the distance medley relay team finished 2nd. The team, consisting of Declan Gilbert, John Choate, Jason Cakouros, and Eric Desharnais, had a team time of 10:22:6; freshman Eric Desharnais ran a 4:22 mile—his first since high school. Again, congratulations are extended to the team and remember folks, the ECAC championships are this weekend, March 6 at Southern Connecticut State University. I would like to stress that these meets are not boring; there is something for everyone to enjoy, even if our Chiefs are not competing in that event.

Registration Physical Education Fourth Quarter

Registration for 4th quarter classes will take place on Wednesday, March 9 from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. on both campuses. Check the Schedule of Classes book for more specific information (pp. 12-13.)

If you have already registered through the computer, do not register again.

Seniors: note especially the day and time, particularly if you need to fulfill your requirements for graduation.

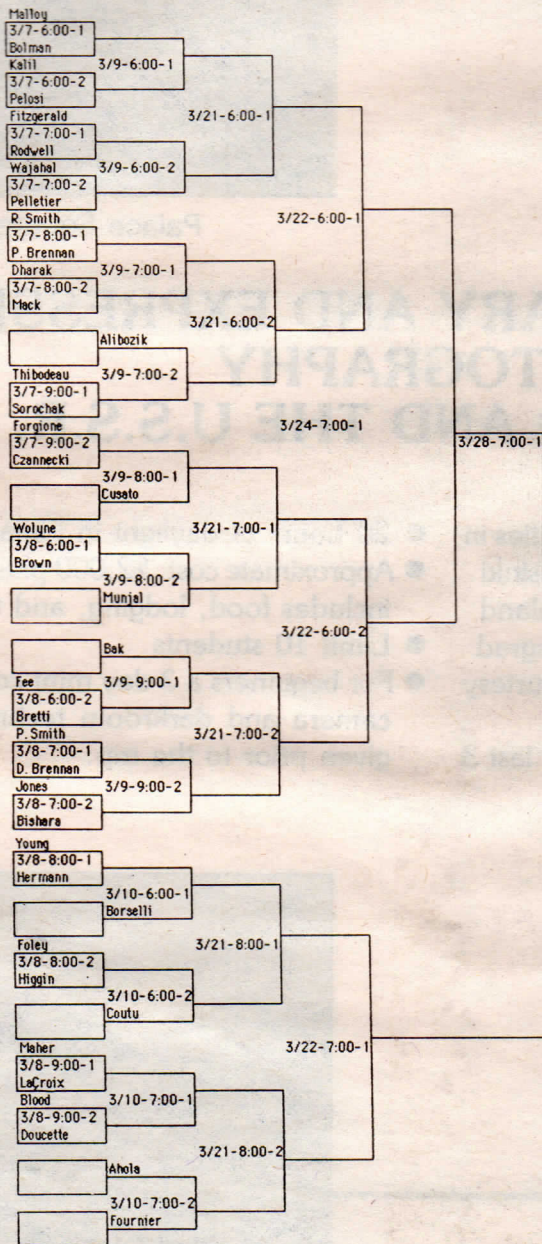

Students wishing to sign up for Independent Activity on South: check Mr. Carrow's door for office hours that week at which time he will register students.

Chiefs prepare for playoffs

By Ed Maguire

Knowing wins in their final two games would secure the home ice advantage in first round play of the 1988 Hockey East playoffs, the skating Chiefs came through this week, defeating Northeastern and New Hampshire. The wins leave U Lowell at 18-15-0 overall and 12-14-0 in Hockey East, good for fourth place.

The Chiefs now prepare to host Boston College in a two game series Friday and Saturday at 7:05 p.m. at the Tully Forum. The team with the most goals in the series will advance to the semi-finals, against either Maine or Northeastern on March 9 & 10. The Hockey East championship game will be played March 14 at the Boston Garden.

Boston College leads the all-time series 11-6-0, however, U Lowell is up 2-1 this year. BC has defeated the Chiefs twice in Hockey East post-season play, both in the 1985 and 1986 tournaments.

The puck drops Friday at 7:05, so let's be there, U Lowell, to cheer our Chiefs to victory. Student tickets may only be purchased the evening of the game.

Lady Chiefs under seige at Costello Gym

By E.Z. Smooth

On February 24, New Hampshire College invaded Costello Gym. The Lady Penmen were in first place and looking for a twenty game season. But, the Lady Chiefs are no pushover team. U Lowell hit 41 percent of their field goals in the first half, and trailed by five, 35-30, at the break. The fans could smell an upset; the Lady Penmen, however, could not. NH College hit 52 percent from the field in the second half, while the Lady Chiefs fell to only 31 percent. Rosalyn Worsley was U Lowell's high scorer with 20 points in this 76-64 loss to NH College. Lisa Powers wheeled in 14 points, 7 rebounds and 4 steals. U Lowell's 'O's' played twins; Mary-Kate O'Leary and Peg O'Connor each had 10 points, and 5 rebounds. Demby dripped in 6 points.

Friday night, February 26, the Lady Chiefs were back in action; and action it was!! There seemed to be an air of unexpectancy in Costello Gym when the Lady Owls of Keene State arrived to meet our Lady Chiefs in their last regular season game. Not since the days of the 'Brighton Boiler,' Kathy Boyle, U Lowell's all-time leading hacker, has Costello Gym heard the sounds of so many whistles from the refs!! The Lady Chiefs could not pump up the offense in the first half, but it was their strong defense that kept it close at the half, 29-26. But the Lady Owls came out gunning in the opening of the second half and the Lady Chiefs would never take the lead in the game. Excellent coaching and 'never-say-die' defense kept it close. The timeouts called by head coach Kathy O'Neil were key. Missy Montini popped 2 three-points shots and Chris Salvo hit for 1 in closing moments of the game. U Lowell could not get the ball with only 2 seconds on the clock, and Keene State pulled a shabby 66-64 victory. High-scorers: Rosalyn Worsley, for the second night in a row, with a game high of 18 points; Mary-Kate O'Leary dished in 14 points, 3 rebounds; Missy Montini tossed in 11 points, and 6 assists; Jennifer Demby flipped in 8 points, 10 rebounds, and 1 blocked shot.

STAR-OF-THE-WEEK:

The Lady Chiefs did have a rough week, but there is still a shining star. ROSALYN WORSLEY, number 12, the ECAC Division II Rookie of the Week, for the last 2 games, netted 38 points, grabbed 19 boards, 3 assists, plus a block and steal! Ms. Worsley is only a Frosh from Pomona, N.Y., but she shoots like she been in the 'big time' for years. Is this an offensive threat?? That would be an understatement!! When Rosalyn heats up, she inflicts third degree burns on opponents. NEXT WEEK: The playoff picture for our Lady Chiefs!

Equestrian news

The U Lowell Equestrian Team is eagerly looking forward to the spring horse show season. There will be a mandatory meeting on February 24, at 6:00, in Coburn 107. Anyone planning on participating this semester must attend this meeting. Interested students are also urged to attend.

Our first horseshow, hosted by Mt. Ida College, will be on March 19 at Pegasus Farm in Westford, MA. There will be a pre-show meeting at 6:00 on March 9 in Coburn 107. We look forward to seeing both old and new members there.

Personals

Dr. Victor von Doom - It seems to me that you brag of powers that you do not possess. You claim to be able to disintegrate any mortal being with the blink of an eye; however, you have failed to do so. I challenge you, Dr. Doom, to remove one of these petty misguided partisans. And then we shall talk of your battling my superior force. The Necromancer

For sale - Rossignol 3G Kevlar skis, 207 cm, good condition, used on season. With Marker MRR bindings - Call Mike at 441-2326 or write to box 223

Were those people in "Campus Cosmos" the six ugliest people on campus or what? Predator

Or perhaps the Russian Women's Swim Team? The Predator

Predator: Pissed off that you weren't included? The Typesetter

Jokester - I see you have finally realized that you are but a small fish, in a large, cruel, mericless, bloodthirsty, unsympathetic pond, and I kinda feel bad for you (yeah, right), but your jokes suck, and we of Devastation, Inc. have no use for a useless turd like you. The Hammer

Dr. Fate: If you're so tired of repetition, use your other hand. The Hammer

Score: Hammer:1, Dr. Fate:0. The Typesetter

Typesetter - I have made no empty promises. I shall rule. You can run, but you cannot hide. And soon, you will no longer run. For you see, Typesetter, my legions have already done away with many a warlord on this page, and it is only a matter of time before you also fall into my dark power. The Grim Reader

Grim Reader: Which war lord(s) have you done away with on this page? Those that are not with us anymore because of lack of grades don't count (and The Shark definitely wasn't a war lord). The Typesetter

Jokester - We of Devastation, Inc. have considered your offer to join forces with us and laughed hysterically for a lengthy period of time, for it is much funnier than any of your previous material. You are worthless and weak. Stay out of our affairs. As a matter of fact, do not even refer to us or we shall devastate you! The Grim Reader

The Typesetter - Predator needs none of your infantile lameness. He's doing quite well on his own. Stay out of others' affairs! Devastation [sic], Inc.

"Devastation, Inc.": It is a shame that you have merged into a group, and have lost your identities as individuals. The Typesetter P.S. Gotta like that spellin'

Dr von Dumb: Your account of the Origin of The Typesetter is boring, bogus, brainless, bullsh*t. m. grappler

Victor Von Doom - "Man, you come right out of a comic book!" m. grappler

NoMuTT - I write strictly my own material. Does the similarity in our replies tell you something? -15th Floor Junior

NoMuTT - I took a number, but it came up negative! -15th Floor Junior

NoMuTT - I've always been partial to pepperoni sticks, rather than cucumbers. They're hotter, you know!! -15th Floor Junior

NoMuTT: ZZZZZ! Grmp! Some people like to sleep at one in the morning! Where's my yellow rose? I think you owe me big time for that! One of the two most important people in the world

Brenda - Exactly what's "in the hole"? What hole? Who's hole? - Your lunatic roommate

To control one's own destiny takes a master mind. To execute the plans takes a fool

Above: Destiny is like a spooked horse: You try to control his direction by pulling on the reins; sometimes he turns in the direction you want, sometimes he doesn't. The Typesetter

Gary - Is it time for "dirty" dancing? How about teaching me the "box" step?

To the men on Leitch 3: You're all big funky sex machines, no matter what everyone else tells you! The 15th Floor Foxes

Weena: No more clams, please! Your wonderful roommate

Be on the lookout: Large Marge could be around the corner (or over the bridge). You never know when and where she will turn up!!

Chuck: In reply to your question Sunday night: I'm not saying no, I'm saying that I need more time to think about it. You're still cute, charmin, adorable, and the most exciting person I know. Ask me in about six months when I've had enough time to think things through. Love forever, Kat

Chuck: I love you. Kat

Nitin, is it really true about you and Dawn? From what I've heard it's pretty hot and heavy!

The Typesetter: in regards to last weeks personal: Don't you wish you had an assistant?!!! The Assistant

The Assistant: I'm currently involved in negotiations with the Sports editor. How well do you.... well, never mind. The Typesetter

Dhiannon: With no one but you do I pig out on life the way we do. I must admit, there are times when that crush I confessed to having still lingers on, when I almost wish you were single. But as friends, we have more than enough fun. I'm looking forward to more riverside pig outs and 2:00am flying lessons, even if we only eat salad. Songwriter

Lady in waiting: Still shocked by your age. Stop. Can't believe you're not older than me. Stop. If you have any more surprises for me, please don't. Stop. notAP.

Eric - Happy Birthday!!! From Everyone

Chuck: I love you. Kat

Laura, Quote of the week, "Boger p----". Action of the week - sliip, slip and slide. Al

Declan: Good job Friday night at New England, but you know you can run just that 1 second faster, can't you!! Next weekend is it... Go for it!! Love, Christopher

Hallings fan be sooo revolting at times

If a freak accident joined him to the computer, (orig pin.2). Why can't he type? The Hammer

The Hammer: GIGO. The Typesetter

Hey PeeWee: Well, we almost made it to Wannalancit last week... Was it almost as good? I think we are getting better! More daring anyway...got to love those big empty parking lots. Love, "DOC"

Chris, Thanks for the great weekend, Oxford wasn't what I thought it would be. Sorry for ever doubting you. Al

The Typesetter: Words actually said by David Gilmour of Pink Flod. The song is "Sorrow". Trained Observer

Trained Observer: Thank you. It is obvious now that you have mentioned it. The Typesetter

To Graduating Women: Have you almost completed college without meeting anyone you could be serious about? If you would like to meet someone interested in starting a relationship based on trust and honesty, then send a reply to R.S. at box 898

To Janine & Brenda - I'd probably be a good 2nd, 3rd, and 4th too! Wouldn't you like to know? The Best and The Slutiest

Above: And you're proud of it? The Typesetter

Lauren* Do you know that when you drink you turn into a vampire. Arousal is not by bites alone, try hot wax and handcuffs or maybe whips and chains! Signed the scoopies

Steve P. - Only Kidding! Wish you were going. S & M 318

Steve P. - How's your car? Have fun in the Bahamas! The Girls on 15

Lauren* You're into biting, is your sister into guns and hand grenades. Unsigned, the scoopies

Dave Carelli: Just because you know what I am do not think you know the person behind the "stereotype". I surprised you once, I could surprise you again. Too bad that "stereotype" bothers you! But I don't care if you don't care. "An apathetic Friend"

Dave and Al: You guys really know how to make someone very angry! We are supposed to be friends all the time, not just when you feel like it. The teed off twosome

When a large grove of fruit bushes was cut down in Nyack, NY, it was discovered that someone wanted to hatchet the berry. -The Punster

The first nudist convention received little coverage. -The Punster

m. grappler - How would you know whether I'm anybody or not? I sure feel like somebody. (Especially to those to feel me!) -The Punster

m. grappler - Is that the best you can do? I was never under the impression that you were a serious threat (or any other kind), but your latest efforts have totally destroyed my estimation of you. You are nobody! Shut up! -The Punster

Tor-mentor: I merely sought to enlighten those less knowing than we. I apologize if you took my submissions in the wrong way. What am I saying? I don't care what you think of my personals. -The Punster

Dr. Victor Von Doom - OK. I know there had to be an explanation. -The Punster

The Punster: Something tells me that I should take that personally. The Typesetter

Jokester - What's wrong? Are you that frightened of me that you must enlist the help of Devastation, Inc.? No matter, for I shall stand tall through it all. -The Punster

The Typesetter - You say you're open to silly questions? Why does a fudgrumper gargle? Yes, it sounds familiar. Thank you. -The Punster

The Typesetter - Will you take me to the grand opening of Bambi Meets Godzilla? -15th Floor Junior.

The Punster: As I'm sure you know, a fudgrumper gargles so that it can achieve sexual bliss. This, of course, may only be done on the 29 of February under a full moon. As you can see, this is a rare occasion and is the stuff folk lore is made of. As for the grand opening of Bambi Meets Godzilla, sure. Of course, it could go down on record as one of the shortest dates(?) in history... The Typesetter

Bagel - What do you mean you lost two balls in my room? -The 15th Floor Junior.

The 15th Floor Junior: I take it that somebody finally got Bagel's zipper down. The Typesetter

NoMuTT - Don't sneeze!! -The 15th Floor Junior

You know it's a Monday when the Ferrari Testarossa you are tailing, at 70 plus mph, is passed by a Toyota Pick-Up truck....

Above: It is not necessarily Monday, just Massachusetts. The Typesetter

Larry Scoop - How's the big "O", or should I say multiple "O's"? -The Assistant

Happy Homemaker: I apologize for my quick disappearance. Life sent me some curve balls and I got busy. Where were we? notAP

Joyce, There's only one thing that I can say to your shining face. "hwaah!"

Kath (n.o.f. 17) - the robe. Why not? I can't! Hwaah, gwazda. Take a pill! -your favorite w.b.

Mark: It was very foolish to try to hide your little exploits from me. Lucky for me, Boob has a big mouth. Now you'll never hear the end of it! At least I've never made a mess like that...you should be ashamed of yourself; my only regret is that I wasn't the one holding the trash bag! -The Tormentor

Poor Soup: He has nothing to hold over my head, so he resorts to fabricating ruthless lies about alcoholism. Soup, Soup, Soup. When will you learn? I hate to keep verbally humiliating you, but you ought to show more respect to your superiors...and you can start by apologizing for addressing me by that other name. -The Tormentor

Soup: You didn't carve your name on those trays? Yeah, sure. Do you really believe that? Whether you're paranoid about people trying to frame you, or just exhibiting denial, I think some psychological help is in order. I beg you, for your sake, get some therapy...there's no shame in that, really! -The Tormentor

Brit A (91) - Just smile and say hello. Signed very much Interested

Notapuck & H&B Puck: You both make me sick. H&B Puck is proud to be an H-bag, while Notapuck deludes herself in the belief she's not one (fat chance). At least one of you must be one of the Swakas. The only difference between both of you and beer is that it only takes one of you to make me vomit. Remember this personal the next time your neck starts to cramp. -Normal Guy

Starting March 3rd, The University of Lowell's Connector Personals Page will be featuring quotes from the Random House biography, "Lookit - The Cat, The Legend." This book, transcribed from tape by Ric Casey, will be available in most book stores by early April of this year.

Hugs: Hey, we did good on Sunday! We would have done even better if we weren't yelled at all morning. Next time we are going without them: think of all the great men we can meet. A Snowbunny

Hotwheels: Which item claims to be your pride and joy? A few twigs combined to be a "cd holder" or what you "real" grown men love to do on Saturday nights. -US

ULowell: We pity the people who get Eames 127 next year. When you find powder residue, a distinct odor of Polo that you just can't get rid of - When you got to sleep at night and hear a crunch or open your drawers and find snow... You should know where to send the clean bills. Send them to the two men pleading with white flags. (Bob and Hotwheels). Warning from B.C.I.E.

To the Dragon: Thanks for the fart. I wish it could've done more. Oh well. Nothing ventured, nothing gained. Long live PMA! Love, Sky

Tara (Pre Law): Thank God for heart-attack smiles and cheery dispositions. You continue to be one of the finest looking ladies on campus. Devil Dog

Laura: SEVEN DAYS!!! Dave

To the inconsiderates of the commuting populace: You should be thankful that I do not own a high rise 4X4. I would not give squashing the abortions you drive a second thought, nor would I be grieved at my accomplishment. I would think a college environment would not promote the presence of idiots, but much to my surprise I find that this is just not so. Grow the hell up!! Devil Dog

Bob, Question of the year: Will you ever find a real recruit or will you forever be bringing your two favorite ladies to watch MIGs flying upside down? By the way - Alf did some things the other night that indicate a distinct identity. I wouldn't sleep in the same bed with him. -B.C.I.E.

To The Vaseles: We think you are great at soccer! If you'd like to play with a few female members from another team, write back next week! -Interested

Sky, Here's a fitting quote for ya: "I am the Seal!" (or at least that's what you were wearing.) I guess I don't owe you a gourd after my rendition of "Monstrous Trumpets for Mary". Smoug

Calliope: Lately you have been gracing the personal pages with your charm and wit. Please get a hold of reality!! Tandem is not the kind of guy you think he is. He's known for cheating and lying to people and he'll stab you in the back when you aren't looking. The advice of Not A Fan of Tandem

And now a two liner so that the little lines at the bottom are all even

Jo: Thanks for the door. Payback is a bitch. Remember that! I could mention a couple of names, but you may hate me for that. Do you know who I'm talking about? Want me to refresh your memory? I'm not going to do anything until I figure out a way to get you back. Like those pictures of you in the cace. Everyone has seen those. Gotta Run. CCCC-ya. Better Half

Jungle Bunny: How was your weekend. Intriguing or what? Partying Thurs., Fri., and Sat. Woke up with a stranger in your bed, huh? Does that happen often? Sounds exciting to me. Hope you didn't do anything you'd regret, if you even remember. Don't you have any resistance? The Resistor

Hey Gary: Happy 3rd month anniversary. You are the best. I'm glad I found you. love ya. Zip

To all the budytrained people out there: I'm drinking this one to all of us who did not get any sleep in the last two weeks, due to an abundance (what a bun does when he's happy?) of circuit, logic and diffy q's test. Get some z's.

Above: I realize that since you are an engineer, you will have a difficult time believing this, but Management majors pull all nighters too....The Typesetter

Boss: What are you thinking?

U know do serkit, u fail. Ooorrr, u stay up all nite and your serkit no werk the folling morning. Baa Haa Baa Haa!

To the unbelievable girl: They're all out to get you, so watch your rear... I do.

Three Piranhas for Sale: 3 1/2 to 4 inches long. Complete with voracious appetite, hours of fun for the whole family! Intimidates strangers. Makes good watchdog. Make me an offer. Pete S324

Hammer; m.grappler? Ah, yes. Now I remember. As I recall, I sent him away with his tail between his legs. As for your own clumsiness, well you can only make that mistake once... just once. The Beast

To the Xmen in Smith: Back off, or we'll make you an offer you can't refuse. Can you comprehend this? The Godfather

"...imagine my surprise when I found out that Scope does nothing to combat Catnip Breath!" -Lookit the Cat

To the Gorgeous Sojourn Editor: You should consider yourself lucky, very few people have been able to get me on film, and lived to tell. So when are you going to stop by? I want to see those pictures. The blonde in Eames 415

NoMuTT: Obviously your name needs to be changed, because after the other night, sweetheart, you need all the help you can get. Change your name to Almost NoMuTT. The Blonde

Anni: Happy belated birthday. oh yeah. OH MY GOD. does this fit? From one who knows

Tara (Pre Law): Thank God for heart-attack smiles and cheery dispositions. You continue to be one of the finest looking ladies on campus. Devil Dog

To the Inconsiderates of the commuting populace: You should be thankful that I do not own a high-rise 4X4. I would not give squashing the abortions you drive a second thought, nor would I be grieved at my my accomplishment. I would think a college environment would not promote the presence of idiots, but much to my surprise I find that this is just not so. Grow the hell up!! Devil Dog

Michelle Lippa - Tell me about Friday night! Can you?

Hammer: It seems your lack of any intelligent to say is bypassed only by your abundance of filthy, disgusting comments. Fine, you came up with a slight one, but I refuse to stoop to your abysmal level. You were scum, you are scum, and you shall remain scum until the end of time. Dr. Fate

To my roommate: So, I understand we are going to win a $200 shopping spree at the Pheasant Lane Mall when we win the Roommate Game. Do they have liquor stores there? Your Roommie

Carla: Sometime I miss other frat's parties. I wish I didn't last week. Talk to ya when I can. -Studemuffin

Studemuffin (?): There must be an interesting story to that name... The Typesetter

M.J. - Thanx for the psychiatric house call, I needed it. Well, here's the personal I promised you. Thanx again -Smitty

Ray: I think we did something wrong. A party is where people have fun. I don't think that happened. Let's not let it happen again, shall we. -PO'ed Roommie

Guinevere: We are just fools to believe; they're like the wind and it could've been so beautiful, could've been so right but they're always gonna give us up, let us down, (always) gonna run around and desert you, always gonna make you cry and say goodbye. Is this all for the glory of love. This isn't living in paradise! "Your Diseased Twin"

NoMIND: The phrase "scum sucking pigs" does ring a bell. Everytime we hear your name, it comes to MIND. It seems to us that you are so MINDlessly uninformed, you can't even spell "Anthony." Perhaps a course in spelling would help. No matter, in your case it seems that ignorance is bliss. -The Anthony Bros. -PS Eat S*!t and die!

Jokester - Glad to see that you came out of the closet. If you want to join something try GOALS. m. grappler

"I've always been amused by humans -- in particular, their notion that (mrrrow) must mean something. It doesn't. Now English...that's a language!" -Lookit the Cat

notAP: It's really nice to see a new face around our place! Finally someone with some, no, a lot of class. You make it worthwhile. Your buddies, The Lady in Waiting and The Fairygoddmother

The Lady in Waiting: What are you waiting for? The Typesetter

Laura: SEVEN DAYS!!!! Dave

What ever happened to the personals war between Leitch 4 and Bogus 1? And I was looking forward to a good battle. Oh well, another one bites the dust. The Typesetter

Britt - The Eight Week Challenge. Counting tips and cleaning up the Bench. No. 100 spontaneous move - breakfast at 3:00. Steve is a house! I can't believe you stole Nickie from me. I also can't believe you guys haven't asked me to "go out" with you guys the pst three times you've had a "smokin' good time"! Thanks for the B.K. run, even if it did rumple a few feathers. What the hell are we gonna do this week? Love, Dee

Becky - It was a red Fiero, not a white one, I know it was. Kidnap that dog. Laughing at the chicken lady. Wouldn't it have been interesting to see what those two would've been like with us? But some people always seem to get in the way. Love ya, roommie! Dee P.S. Only 50 more days to go

Spenser for Hire: An intimate dinner to two from and hour and a half phone call! Thanks for stealing my date. Oh, I'm here on business to see, um, Lisa. Where the hell have you been - it's 4:00 in the morning. Wanna color easter eggs? Wanna do a 68? I think you should have a talk with her - she tore my name down. Thanks, roommi! Love, Hawk

Deana and Becky, Guess where I went after lunch? I'm not telling but I know you can guess if you try hard enough. Becky, someday I'll beat you in golf and maybe I won't be fake anymore and someone will like me for who I really am. Dee, you can eat your Whopper Jr. in a few days. Maybe then someone will care enough about you to want you to get well, but I'll always look out for your best interests if no one else will. Get rid of him! Ok, but how? Oh Mother Hubbard, where are you? Love ya, Lisa

Hawk, 46 more days to go, do you think you can make it? He's coming to take me out to dinner, but you can come if you want to. Hey, what's a 68? I think you better talk to her soon. Other girls are starting to bother me now! Emergency room at 10:00, plain chicken tenders and hot dogs. Hey, where were you after lunch? Where did you call me from? You should have seen the look. Get well soon. Love ya roomie. Spencer for Hire

Half the Body Shop: Happy birthday!! yes I did remember and I'll never forget you. I hope you have a pissa day and I owe you a drink out when you can get out. I hope the candy shop can spare a little time for a nite out. Keep in touch. Love ya, Nee

White Escort from Eames: What did you see at the Show Case on Saturday? Blue Truck from Smith

Kim, Just who do you think you are not calling and letting us know where you are? Seriously though, you had me worried - glad nothing happened. P.S. How was the pizza?

Chris (Coco): Ok Gay, how do you explain your behavior Sat. night? Did you pass out on the wrong floor? I think so. You can thank us later for peeling you off the floor. Oh, one more thing - how did the gum get on your pants??

Laurie and Cathy: !HOLA, amigas! Whada ya say? Will we survive another day with La puta? Tune in when the Prof. says... "No!"

To the laughing blonde bimbo in the south camp, commuter caf., M, W, F from 1-2: We are concerned, is your laugh a birth defect or just an echo from your empty head?

"We [cats] actually laugh a lot. We just do it quietly, and usually in the litterbox." -Lookit the Cat

To Michelle and Joanne: How are you, my fine feathered friends? Happy Spring! Love, Nancy

Lori Swacker: "It's so funny he thinks he can get me." (no way Lori, really.)
